

Heating your home

Many Minnesotans struggle to pay their home heating bills during the winter months. This winter, families will once again have to sit down to figure out how to pay for the increased energy costs to heat their homes. If you are struggling to pay your energy bill, you should contact your utility company as soon as you realize you will be unable to pay your bill in full. In Minnesota, the “Cold Weather Rule” governs whether utility providers can turn off your heat between October 15 and April 15. For more information on the “Cold Weather Rule,” click here.

For low income households that pay a high proportion of household income for home energy, there is a federally funded block grant program called the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP). LIHEAP participants receive partial payment of their monthly heating bill based on their income level. To learn more about LIHEAP and whether or not you qualify, please click here.

Weatherization

There are many ways to get your home ready for the winter months. Make sure you change your furnace filter every month and install a programmable thermostat. Lowering the temperature while you're sleeping and at work will help you save some money.

If your home is older, it may still have the original windows and doors, which often leak heat. Putting up weather stripping around the doors and windows prevents cold air from entering the house. Before the winter sets in, it is important for all home owners to inspect the exterior of their home for cracks and exposed entry points around pipes. Visit your local home improvement store for suggestions on sealing cracks, entry points and leaky windows or click here for more information.

If you are interested in making your home more energy efficient but cannot afford the improvements, the federally-funded Weatherization Assistance Program may be able to help your family. Basic necessities

Both the School Breakfast Program and the National School Lunch Program exist to protect the health and well-being of American children by providing meals for children whose families have a hard time affording food. All school-age children up to and including high school seniors are eligible for the program if their family income meets the guidelines. To determine if your family is eligible or to complete an application, please contact your child's school.

The Women, Infants and Children Program provides nutritional assistance for low-income pregnant mothers, new mothers, infants and young children. To learn more about WIC or to apply for WIC assistance, click here.

Assistance for seniors struggling to pay for food and medicine is available through a number of local programs in Minnesota. More information is available here.

Unemployment Insurance

Workers who are recently unemployed through no fault of their own may be eligible for Unemployment Insurance

. Recently, Congress extended unemployment benefits from 13 weeks to 26 weeks, allowing workers the extra time they need to find a new job in our challenging economy.

Health Care & Health Insurance

Low-income children across America receive health care through the State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP.) In Minnesota, SCHIP is called MinnesotaCare. MinnesotaCare is also available to low-income Minnesota adults who lack affordable health care coverage. For more information in enrolling in MinnesotaCare, click here .
